*Indiana State Normal School,
The Year 1918-1919.*

Dear Reader, -

We are sending forth for you a little chronicle of the happenings of this eventful year. More has happened out in the world and more has happened at I.S.N. than could be put into a library, but we have carefully selected the principal Advances of the year for our Annual and put them into picture and story with the hope that when you have turned over the pages and arrived at the "Adieu", you will feel that you have had a pleasant visit to our Alma Mater.

*Very truly yours,
The Class of 1919.*

But more of reverence in us dwell,
That mind and soul, according well,
May make one music as before."*

—TENNYSON.

*"Knowledge comes, but wisdom lingers, and we linger
on the shore,
And the individual withers, and the world is more and more."*

—TENNYSON.

*"Through me the way is to the city of woe,
Through me the way is to eternal pain,
Through me the way is among the people lost,
All hope abandon, ye who enter in."*

—DANTE.

"The truly educated man or woman can work skillfully with the hands as well as with the head."

"Science peddling with the names of things."

—LOWELL.

"People must be amused, squire, somehow, they can't be always a working, nor yet they can't be always a learning. Make the best of it, says I, not the worst."

—DICKENS.

"Eat, drink and be merry, for today we live and tomorrow we die."

"The perfection of teaching is, like the perfection of all things, partly given by nature, but this is assisted by art, and if you have the natural power, you will be famous as a teacher if you only add knowledge and practice."

It is rarely necessary for an individual or an organization to call attention to its own accomplishments. Usually they are self-evident. It is so with the class of 1920; consequently, it is to our absent classmates rather than those who are with us that we wish to dedicate these few lines.

To those whose eyes brighten and whose memories are stirred by the mention of Argonne Forest, Belleau Wood and Chateau-Thierry—to those who spent many long months preparing themselves for the task they had undertaken; yet were denied the privilege of every fighter's desire—service overseas—and last but not least to those who sacrificed more than words can express in order that they might "Keep the Home Fires Burning."

It will not be long till we are all again united, working for a common end and bound with mutual ties and, in our reunion there can be but one purpose and one desire,—to make the class of 1920 worthy to fill the place of the class of 1919.

SOPHOMORES

Sophomore Officers

EDSON WISELY
President

DOROTHY GLENN
Secretary-Treasurer

JOHN YOUNG
Vice-President

In the Fall term, a meeting of all sophomores was called by Edson Wisely to organize the class. At this meeting, the following officers were elected: Edson Wisely, president; John Young, vice-president; Dorothy Glenn, secretary-treasurer. Russell Binning was chosen as Sophomore editor for the Annual. John Young and Estelle Perkins were elected as representatives to the Oratorical and Debating League.

Although the class has had no social activities, it has aided all that the school has undertaken. You can see Sophomores working at all times to boost I. S. N. S.—on the athletic teams, on the staff of the Advance, in the Y. M. C. A., and Y. W. C. A. "Loyalty to our school" the thing for which every Sophomore stands.

FRESHMEN

Freshman Officers

BURGITT MANHART
President

EDWIN KELLEY
Treasurer

HUBERT HUEBNER
Secretary

IRENE BOOTS
Vice-President

Due to several interruptions of school routine, the Freshman class had no class organization during the Fall quarter. It was not, in fact, until the last of February that a class meeting was held. At this meeting, F. B. Manhart was elected president; Irene Boots, vice-president; Hubert Huebner, secretary, and Edwin Kelley, treasurer. Bruce Shanner was elected Freshman representative on the Advance Board and Hazel Wills, Freshman Editor on the Annual staff. At a subsequent meeting, a dance to be given in the near future was planned which will start the class activities.

The Freshman Class

O Freshman class! O Freshman Class! how smiling were our faces!
Green not alone in registering,
But in each class room's numbering!
O Freshman Class! O Freshman! how lengthy grew our faces!
O Freshie friends! O Freshie friends! how many were our troubles!
How loud laughed they, the Sophs so gay,
At each blunder we made that day!
O Freshie friends! O Freshie friends! but transient were our troubles!
The Seniors wise, the Seniors wise, we took for our examples!
How fast we learned how wise we grew,
Joyously "As" we sometimes view!
O Seniors wise! O Seniors wise! we're glad for your example!
Yet Normal School! Old Normal School! you're treasured in deep friendship,
That lasts as long as falls the rain,
No years will ever let it wane.
Old Normal School! Old Normal School! you're treasured in our friendship!

Many loved Truth, and lavished life's best oil
Amid the dust of books to find her,
Content at last, for guerdon of their toil,
With the cast mantle she hath left behind her.
Many in sad faith sought for her,
Many with crossed hands sighed for her,
But these our brothers fought for her,
At life's dear peril wrought for her,
So loved her that they died for her,
Tasting the raptured fleetness
Of her divine completeness:
Their higher instinct knew
They love her best who to themselves are true,
And what they dare to dream of, dare to do;
They followed her and found her
Where all may hope to find.
Not in the ashes of the burnt-out mind
But beautiful with danger's sweetness 'round her
Where faith made whole with deed
Breathes its awakening breath
Into the lifeless creed,
They saw her plumed and mailed,
With sweet stern face unveiled,
And all-repaying eyes look proud on them in death.

JAMES RUSSELL LOWELL.

This is Verdun Belle, who came no one knew not whence—so one of our Normal boys tells us—to the trenches near Verdun. She selected one particular regiment and one particular private for her very own, and stuck through thick and thin. And it was no case of unrequited love, for we are told her young master not only managed to find a bite for her always in his mess kit, but also contrived a gas mask for her. That Belle appreciated this was shown by her never failing answer to the first alerte.

In May two important things happened. Belle presented the regiment with nine pups, and an order came for the very own regiment to move across France to help stem the German tide at the Marne. In the excitement Verdun Belle and her family were forgotten by all save her very own private, who found a market basket in which he carried the pups, followed by the grateful Mother Belle.

It was a hard way for the very own private and Belle and the pups, for by this time the road was black with hurrying troops, lumbering lorries, and a desolate retreating procession of refugees trundling their most cherished possessions in wheelbarrows and baby carriages. And in the confusion Belle was lost. Day followed day and still no Belle, and meanwhile the very own private was left desolate with the two pups who had survived. A kindly French woman gave him milk and an eye-dropper, but the contrivance was not very successful. The last minute came. The very own private was ordered into action. In despair he thrust the deserted pups on a lieutenant and obeyed orders.

In a few more days a fresh contingent of marines arrived with food, ammunition, fresh hope—and Verdun Belle. It was a happy reunion, save for the absence of the very own private. And then one evening he came—wounded, just an ordinary case of shell shock, ordinary to the regiment and the medicals, that is, but to Verdun Belle it was the very own private and happiness once more. And yet some young psychologists say that dogs cannot remember.

And the Good News Came to Terre Haute

It may have been about 2:30, on Monday morning, November eleven, that we were awakened by the continuous blowing of a few whistles out toward the northeast part of the city. One by one other whistles, big and little, joined in; then the bells began and tried to outnumber and outdo the whistles, but, when the big bass voiced roared from the distillery whistles opened, all else was lost and the whistles ruled.

The order seems to be to roar, then rest, then loud and louder roar again. This was kept up for some time and then we began to hear autos tuning up and the newsboys calling and our eyes were not sleepy any more and we read aloud to the family at attention the good news. There could be but one cause for all this commotion and we felt that the news must be true this time. Then we hurried to get ready to go to school and to get up town for we were hearing that there were "doings" going on up there.

At 7:25 we came to Wabash Ave., at Sixth street and a parade of Vandalia shop men and of miners were marching west.

And there was noise everywhere and shouting and singing and people walked "like life was young." And we went to our classes and somehow managed to keep the gas low and the cut-outs closed during that first period. When we assembled for chapel it was almost possible to see something big was up Pres. Parsons' sleeve. It boded well for the underworked students who had had an enforced vacation of five weeks.

Now could we do anything more appropriate than to sing "The Star Spangled Banner," or could Pres. Parsons read anything more fitting than to "make a joyful noise unto the Lord" and to "sing a new song"?

After the singing and reading the President spoke of the signing of the terms of the armistice and of the great things that had been accomplished.

We adjourned to meet at 10 o'clock ready for the parade and we hurried for flags and horns and other instruments that seemed to contain "joyful" noises. The gathering was along Eagle street and extended from Sixth to the Student Building and was headed by a drum corps composed of Prof. Victor Miller, fifer; Charlie Call, Library custodian, drummer, and others. Pres. and Mrs. Parsons led and were followed by the young ladies of the faculty; then the men, then the S. A. T. C. boys; then Indiana's choicest and then came the Training school. We marched west to Fifth street, south to Cherry, west to Fourth, then south to Wabash Avenue; east to Ninth and back to Seventh, then north and disbanded. We had to force our way into the procession as there was no order of arrangements or marshals or super persons anywhere to boss things.

The plan seemed to go east on the south side of Wabash Avenue, and west on the north side and parade where you pleased, when you pleased and as long as you liked. People walked or rode in wagons or buggies or trucks, or Fords or Packards and these people were making merry and made beautiful noises by hammering on circular saws and boiler plates; by bells mounted and swinging or bells pounded by vigorous youngsters. Wash boilers, wash tubs, empty oil cans, garbage cans and scraps of sheet iron were tied dog tail and tin can fashion to the rear of vehicles. Immature cannons were hauled on trucks and the common run of dead level racket was punctured with large periods.

The principal exercise of the day was held at Seventh and Wabash between 10:30 and 11:30. Speaking was impossible but band music and singing gave vent to the desire to rejoice. The streets at this intersection were jammed full of people; traffic stood still; great loads of scrap paper and paper streamers were thrown from the top windows of the Trust Building. The most impressive thing of the whole day of rejoicing was on the stroke of eleven. A few minutes before eleven a spokesman, on the balcony of the Terre Haute House, requested that at the stroke of eleven everybody bow the head and join in the silent one minute prayer and thank God for the Victory and Peace.

Then the band played and the people sang and waved flags and the noise continued but all eyes were turned toward the timekeeper on the balcony and, at the signal from him, that eleven o'clock had come, "the shouting and tumult" ceased and typical America stood with bared, bowed heads at prayer.

Then we sang, "Praise God From Whom All Blessings Flow."

The Honor Roll

The boys upon the honor roll, God bless them
all, I pray
God watch them while they sleep at night,
and guard them through the day.
We've stamped their names upon our walls,
the list in glory grows,
Our brave boys and our splendid boys who stand to meet the foes.
Oh, here are sons of mothers fair and fathers
fine and true,
The little ones of yesterday, the children that we knew;
We thought of them as youngsters gay, still laughing at their games.
And then we found the honor roll emblazoned with their names.
We missed their laughter and their cheer; it seems but yesterday
We had them here to walk with us, and now they've marched away.
And here where once they were seen we keep a printed scroll;
The absent boys we long to see are on the honor roll.
So quickly did the summons come we scarcely marked the change,
One day life marched its normal pace, the next all things seemed strange,
And when we questioned where they were,
the sturdiest of us all
We saw the silent honor roll, on each familiar wall.
The laughter that we knew has gone; the merry voice of youth
No longer rings where graybeards sit, discussing sombre truth.
No longer jests are flung about to rouse our weary souls,
For they who meant so much to us are on our
honor roll.

A Patriotic Creed

To serve my country day by day
At any humble post I may;
To honor and respect her Flag,
To live the traits of which I brag;
To be American in deed
As well as in my printed creed.
To stand for truth and honest toil,
To keep my little patch of soil
And keep in mind the debt I owe
To them who died that I might know
My country, prosperous and free,
And passed this heritage to me.
I must be guided in trouble's hour
Be guided by the men in power;
For God and country I must live,
My best for God and country give;
No act of mine that men may scan
Must shame the name American.
To do my best and play my part,
American in mind and heart;
To serve the flag and bravely stand
To guard the glory of my land;
To be American in deed,
God grant me strength to keep this creed.

The Call to Service

These are the days when little thought
Must cease men's minds to occupy;
The nation needs men's larger creeds,
Big men must answer to her cry;
No longer selfish ways we tread,
The greater task lies just ahead.
These are the days when petty things
By all men must be thrust aside;
The country needs men's finest deeds,
Awakened is the nation's pride;
Men must forget their selfish strife
Once more to guard their country's life.

S. A. T. C.

On October 5, the first of the Normal S. A. T. C. unit was mustered into service. In a few days the company had reached a total strength of one hundred and sixty men. This company remained intact except for the transfer of seven men to Purdue and the death of our comrade, Private Forest Bultman, who died of influenza. Much credit is due Sgts. Wisely, Schinnerer, Lloyd, and Herrmann who went to the R. O. T. C. at Camp Sheridan last summer and were returned here. Sgts. Kamm and Kerr were connected with the personnel.

For some time Lt. Rockwell was forced to work alone due to the illness of Lts. Babson and Moynihan, but later was relieved to some extent by the arrival of Lt. Jones and the recovery of Lt. Moynihan.

A Y. M. C. A. secretary was sent here and did much in securing entertainment. The closing of school on account of the influenza made a very large amount of time available for drill and field work and the company was a well drilled organization when demobilization began on Dec. 13. Several men were expecting to leave at once for O. T. C. but were not called owing to the signing of the armistice. All members of the organization are loud in their praise of the fine treatment they received from President Parsons, the school, and our never tiring commandant, Lt. Rockwell.

S. A. T. C. Activities

At the beginning of the Fall term '18, new activities begun to display themselves around the campus and through the halls of I. S. N. S.

We all adored the khaki and now we were to have it near at hand. We begun to hear hob nails echoing and re-echoing through the halls as these young giants moved to and fro from class rooms.

All went well for the first few weeks until one night a guard was posted and these fellows had to walk post at night and go to school the next day. Then life became more strenuous. When some professor would call the name of Charles Smith, Private Smith would be suddenly awakened, stand at attention and answer, "Here Sir." About this time this Kaiser hater would begin to recite, an orderly would appear at the door and call that Pvt. Charles Smith should report at the orderly room at once. Pvt. Smith would knock, enter, salute, stand at attention and tell the lieutenant that the third figure in his pay number was an eight instead of a seven, and that he knew absolutely nothing about the apples that disappeared from the cafeteria and that he was not in charge of the barracks police the morning that the scraps of Esthers letter were found behind the radiator near the bulletin board. Then Saturday morning there is a hurry to breakfast and a hurry away. The barracks were thoroughly manicured and the cots and rifles gotten ready for inspection. About ten o'clock every man appeared with shoes shined, clean blouse and leggings, with all of the cosmoline out of the chamber of the rifle.

After inspection, passes were granted for week end leaves, and the barracks were desolate until about eight o'clock Sunday night. Wednesday P. M. everybody interested in foot ball or base ball went to Parson's Field and there foot ball and other games were played.

We would like to know why Sixth Street was the most popular place around camp from chow until study period every night. We would like to know why Lieutenant Jones said fall out and fall in at attention on the other side of the fence when he came to the gate at Parsons Field. Also if there were any vocal solos heard in the barracks between 10:00 and 11:00 except the first night.

The Woman's League was organized in 1897 as a society of upper class-women to aid and welcome the new women students. Membership was open to all women students upon payment of an annual fee.

In 1905 the Constitution was changed. Chapters were formed but all were governed by the Executive Committee composed of the officers of the League and of the various chapters. The object of this new organization is "to strengthen the spirit of unity and sense of individual responsibility among the women students of the school."

The League sees that the social standards of Normal is made and kept high.

The greatest step to this "spirit of unity is the Big Sister Movement" begun by the Y. W. C. A. and the League. Each section girl becomes a Big Sister to the entering student and cares for her during her period in school. With this impetus the league begins the year that will be the most successful of its career.

Ciceronian

As the Ciceronian Debating Society approaches its fourteenth anniversary, it is with a deep sense of pride that it turns back again to review those meaningful years. 'Tis with a feeling of great privilege that the present membership recalls those pleasant associations of the past and 'tis with a sense of fellowship that it views its present relations.

Founded on a high purpose of friendship, effective expression of christian manhood, an appreciation of good literature, dedicated to the classic master of public debate of the eternal city of the seven hills, it needs no other proof of its stewardship than the splendid men, associated with its name during those years. The membership of the Purple and White, now scattered far and wide, have always recalled the name of the society with pleasure.

In the supreme crisis of our Nation's history, the Purple and White entwined with the star bedecked emblem of democracy, stood for patriotism. To the stirring challenge of duty, it gave a splendid response and many of its membership made offer of the supreme sacrifice that the great heart of America might live. In camp and in the second line, they served with a patriotism enlightened and ennobled by understanding, and inspired by a Vision of Justice.

To the membership wherever they be, the society extends an invitation to be with us during commencement week, when we will renew associations by an outing on the banks of the Wabash. The annual dance of the winter quarter was one of the most successful events given and it is planned to make the entertainment in June as good or better.

The year's work has been devoted to debating on current questions, parliamentary drill and review of books. The inter-society debate which was to have been with the Trojan Society was cancelled because of failure to arrange a convenient date.

During the year the society elected to membership the following men: Joseph McKinney, Loren Reed, Burgett Manhardt, Julian Austin, Harlan Miller, Russel Tucker, Robert Strickler, Kell Ferguson, Stanley Yants, Virgil R. Mullins, Clements.

The predominating spirit of the organization may well be expressed by the slogan "Quality Rather Than Quantity."

Alethenai

FLOWERS—Pink Tea Rose.

COLORS—Green and Gold

The Alethenai Literary Society was organized as a debating society at the beginning of the Fall term 1906, the membership was limited to twelve members and the meetings were held every two weeks. The charter members were Helen Crane, Rosa Dell, Addie Juday, Mabel Lovett, Myrtle Ross, Ora Stallings, Elsie Denny, Clara Sexson, Clara Wright, and Ethel Burton.

In 1914 a new constitution was drawn up. The membership of the society was increased to forty and the interests broadened so that its purpose now includes anything which promotes culture, refinement, and education.

Although the society was not active during the fall term, this year has been quite successful. At the beginning of the winter term the society was reorganized with the following officers: Berniece Burk, president; Mabel Churchman, vice-president; Georgia Baker, secretary; Helen Milks, treasurer. The modern drama was studied and proved to be a very interesting and profitable line of work. The officers were Rosa Schwartz, president; Edith Olbrich, vice-president; Georgia Baker, secretary; Myrtle Bray, treasurer. Representative authors of the different countries were used as topics for discussion at the weekly meetings. Parliamentary drill was an important part of each program.

Quoting from a discussion by Miss Neil, 1915: "If the word, Alethea, has the relation that its form indicates to the word, alethenai the latter means, according to translation from the Greeks, truth, the ones that it should suggest to future members, true effort." With this thought in mind, "Alethenai" has really meant to us true effort and we hope that in the future as in the past, the Alethenai Literary Society will continue to stand for her true effort in some field of literature by the means of an efficient program, careful preparation on the part of each member, thoughtful preparation and kind, helpful criticism.

Daedalian

The S. A. T. C. regime during the fall term made effective work on the part of the Daedalian Literary Society almost impossible. However, regular meetings were held at which short literary programs were given. The old Daedalians returning for the fall term were Harry Boyle, Otis Wilson, Thomas McGuire, Earnest Campbell, John Young, Vane Rutherford, and Clifford Fredrick. At the beginning of the winter term J. Carlton Hannah, Thomas Arvin, Rollin Schafer, Glenn Curtis, Mark Gantz, Fitzhugh Taylor, and Frank McLaughlin re-entered school as active members, and Major Birch Bayh, an honorary member, took his place on the faculty.

The chief purpose of the Daedalian Literary Society is to develop literary talent and train its members for public speaking. But the social side of college life is not neglected. Plans are now being made for the annual banquet, the boat ride and the Forest Park picnic as well as other social "stunts". The Daedalians have always been represented on the Inter-state Debating Teams. They have won six out of eight Inter-Society Debates, four of them consecutive victories. Daedalianism with all its cares and pleasures means much to those who have enjoyed its associations. It sets a high standard of honor, honesty, courage, and patriotism, and requires all to be up and doing to maintain the standard.

Philomathean

The Philomathean Literary Society was organized on January 16, 1909, by eight young women of the school, the Philomathean Literary and Debating Society. The members were assisted in the organization of the society by Professor James L. Lardner, head of the Department of Public Speaking, who kindly drew up the first constitution and offered helpful suggestions. The charter members were Anna Piepenbrink, Elizabeth Ellis, Margaret Yunker, Mae Lamb, Beulah Reinhart, Margaret Hardie, Eunice Asbury, and Pearl Crossgrave.

The Philomathean Literary Society was reorganized in 1916 and since then the members have devoted one afternoon each week to the study of literature and art, and have found the work to be both pleasant and profitable. The programs given this year have been of a diversified character and have covered different subjects of musical and literary nature. The latter part of the year has been devoted to study of various phases of war literature, including poetry, dramas, and great personalities who figured in the world war.

The officers of the society are: Evelyn Wills, president; Katherine Jarvis, vice-president; Winifred Stewart, secretary-treasurer; Mabel Fuqua, corresponding-secretary; Dorothea Wyeth, parliamentarian; Mildred Sine, pianist; Estelle Perkins, chorister; Jeanette Landrum, artist, and Blanche Allen, librarian. The other members of the society including those recently initiated are Ruth Turman, Gladys Brown, Ellen Modesitt, Elsie Foltz, Helen Kennedy, Margaret Zerbe, Isa Mullikin, Martha Newell, Esther Hance, Anne Malone, Hazle Wills, Ruth Swearingen, Vivian Bard, Gladys Spencer, Helen McCullough, Gertrude Kanzleiter, Edna Bennett, Hazel Oliphant, Virginia Davis, Mary Hollis, Florise Hunsucker, Mabel Hood, and Beulah Chappelle.

While the society is organized for the study of literature and art that is not the only benefit derived by the members. It has been the means for a closer friendship which will last through the years to come, and the spirit of Philomathean will have a lasting effect on all who have belonged to the society.

The past year has been a peculiar one on account of the war. During the fall term there were no regular officers or meetings on account of the S. A. T. C. The Winter quarter found the body back in full swing with many old members returning from the army. The following were officers during this term: Ray Warmouth, president; Paul Witty, vice-president; Walter Zerbe, secretary, and Paul Asher, treasurer. The Spring term found the Forum House at 507 N. Fifth street filled to its capacity. The following officers were elected for the term: Glen Clodfelter, president; Paul Asher, vice-president; Herbert Labr, secretary, and Lee Fox, treasurer.

Fifty-seven Forum men are or have been in the army and the present body eagerly awaits the return of our brothers now overseas.

Eclectic

The Eclectic Literary Society has just finished the sixth chapter of its history. It was organized February 6, 1913, with the assistance of Mr. Wisely, who made the first constitution and by-laws. The society started with fifteen charter members.

The purpose of the society has been to promote the art of public speaking and to give knowledge along the lines of art, science, literature and travel. This purpose has been thoroughly carried out in the effective work done in the last year.

At the opening of the fall term, the following members answered to roll call: Lois Duvall, Lois Payton, Mamie Overpeck, Belle Painter, Olive Stewart, Ora McReynolds, and Ethel Runyan. During the winter, the following members were admitted to the society: Lucille Bauman, Evangeline Hildreth, Charlotte Kruzan, Hazel Grenard, Naomi Grenard, Dessie Nickels, Evelyn Robinson, Glenn Asher, Inda Wise, Ethel Seward, Rachael Wilhite, Erma Kent, Ruby Keeling, Pearl Hoppes, Bertha Hughes, Clara Allen, Eleanor Taylor, Ruth Lee, Benlah Fisher, Delpha Sefrit, Marguerite O'Connell, and Zelia Kester.

At the opening of the spring term, Bessie Erwin and Martha Shively again joined the ranks while Erma Kint, Lois Duvall and Zelia Kester withdrew.

The work this year has been devoted to the study of modern writers. The writers whose lives and works have been studied were: Arnold Bennett, John Galsworthy, Maurice Maeterlinck, Bernard Shaw, Clyde Fitch, and Oscar Wilde. Along with this, current events and parliamentary law were studied. At many meetings the society was favored by music and readings rendered by its members.

Although there was no extensive social activity, yet the social side was not wholly neglected by the Eclectics. At the beginning of each term, an informal tea was given for prospective members. The annual picnic will be given the first of June.

The members to be graduated are: Marguerite O'Connell, Lois Duvall, Lois Payton, Lucille Bauman, Mamie Overpeck, Evelyn Robinson, Dessie Nickels, Delpha Sefrit, Eleanor Taylor, Erma Kint, Ora McReynolds, Hazel Grenard, Bessie Erwin, Ethel Seward, and Inda Wise.

The members have found the years' work and association together very pleasant.

Trojan

The Trojan Literary Society, organized in April, 1914, has just passed the fifth mile-stone of her history. And its members may well be proud of that history. It is with great pleasure and pride that a new member listens to the "Tales of the Trojans of Old" and emerges from the same with an inspiration which gives him a vision and a task.

The aim of the founders of this society was to develop self-confidence and increase personality among its members. The Society welcomes men of wisdom, men of power, men who will ever keep in mind the glory of the Trojans; but far more her desires are for men of character, men of principle and vision, men who hold foremost in their thoughts the welfare of their fellow students and their Alma Mater.

Because of war conditions, the membership has been rather small but with the return of several men who have been in military service, activities are again increasing. Many of these men have seen overseas service and have proved themselves to be gallant sons of Liberty and who were not ready to return until "it was over over there."

The regular meetings of the society have been very beneficial to its members. Debating questions of current history, discussions on chosen topics of interest, parliamentary drill, etc., have all found a place on the weekly program.

In athletic activities, the Trojans lived up to their standards by having four men on the basket ball squad and a goodly representation on the baseball team.

The present membership of twenty-one men extends greetings and best wishes to all associate and honorary members not in school at the present time, and issues to them an invitation to visit Old Normal and the society.

The Trojan Seniors and other members who leave this year will be sadly missed and those remaining bid them a hearty God-speed. The Seniors' regards, in turn, remain with those who are to be the Trojanites of 1919-1920.

Psychology Research Club

On the twenty-ninth of January, 1918, a group of students interested in Psychology and research work organized, under the direction of Dr. Rudolph Acher, the psychological Research Association. The membership at the end of its first term had grown from the original eleven to fifteen. Many interesting phases of psychological work were presented and interest among the members was high.

Due to the various interruptions during the fall quarter last year the club was not re-organized until after Christmas. The name has been changed to the Psychological Research Club. The work of this year has dealt with the subconscious mind.

Y. M. C. A.

The work done by the Y. M. C. A. in the Fall term was like that done by the "Y" in the army camps. The Student Army Training Corps of the school came into existence during the first and second weeks of the Fall term and presented problems of the army as the men were quartered in the Normal buildings.

The first day of the term found Mr. H. J. Thompson on the grounds as "Y" secretary sent here by the National War Work Council. Through the aid given by him, many plans were worked out for the work to be done by this organization.

The first Friday night, a reception was given the student soldiers and the girls of the school in which the men were initiated into the army life.

When the influenza struck camp, a new field was opened for activity besides the distribution of writing material and other supplies which had to be done. Reading material and games were placed in the many hospitals by men of the Y who were not in the S. A. T. C. When Mr. Thompson became the victim of the epidemic, Dean Pattison took his place as secretary and with the help of Thomas McGuire, the men were given the Y service.

With the opening of the Winter Term many old men were back in school, chief of whom was Major Birch Bayh. This added new spirit to the work as he was the faculty representative who went to Indianapolis to a state conference, coming back helping put on the Discussion Group program, which was the work done in the Winter term.

The Spring term brought the election of Robert Strickler, Pres.; Dean Pattison, Vice-Pres.; and Edwin Boots, Sec.-Treas. The State Officer's Conference was held at the City Y. W. C. A., April 11, 12, 13, where Rose and Normal entertained forty-five men. Following this was the great thing of the year, "Dad Elliott" was here for three days holding a series of meetings between Rose and Normal. These were the genesis of a new spirit life for Normal which is hoped will be carried on during the remainder of the year by the ten or fifteen men who attend the Lake Geneva Conference, June 13 to 22.

Y. W. C. A.

The Fall term opened very inauspiciously for the Y. W. C. A., the "flu" epidemic stopping all the plans that had been made. In the Winter and Spring Quarters, however, the girls made up for lost time. Each term a reception was given by the Y. M. C. A. and Y. W. C. A. These affairs did an invaluable service in making the student body acquainted with each other. Several delightful teas were also given at the Student Building.

At the opening of the Spring term, Miss Hazel Bent, the Student Secretary of the Central Field, spent a few days at I. S. N. S. She proved a great inspiration to the girls and cabinet officers alike. During the term, a Mid-spring reception was given in addition to the one at the opening of the quarter. The first week in May, five of the officers attended a Cabinet Council at Charleston, Ill.

The Social Service Committee has done splendid work. Y. W. C. A. girls under the direction of this committee, have been doing playground work at the Settlement House. Others have helped in the Americanization movement in the eastern part of the city. Plans are on foot to extend the scope of this work during the summer.

The biggest feature in the year for the Y. W. C. A., however, was the starting of the "Big Sister" movement. The new students were met at the station, helped to find rooms and to register, and in every way possible were made to feel that the older girls had a pleasant interest in them.

The officers for the past year were: Naomi Grenard, president; Jeanette Landrum, vice-president; Gladys Spencer, secretary, and Myrtle Miller, treasurer. For the coming year, Estelle Perkins has been elected president; Marion Davis, vice-president; Mildred Hansel, secretary, and Gladys Spencer, treasurer.

The work will be carried on during the summer by the Vice-President. The Y. W. C. A. is looking forward to a year full of happy association and splendid service.

St. Thomas Aquinas Club

The St. Thomas Aquinas Club was organized in 1898 to meet the social and religious needs of the Catholic students at Normal. Since that time it has been in active operation.

The work of the club has been in the main the study of the Christian Doctrine; but as occasion offered, it has branched off from this work and topics of current interest have been studied. Some attention has been given each term to social functions.

The club reorganized at the beginning of the spring quarter of 1919, elected officers, and outlined a course of work to be carried out during the term. Enthusiastic meetings held each week promise a successful year for the club.

The officers elected for the term are: Edward Riehl, president; Fred Evrard, vice-president, and Marguerite O'Connell, secretary.

Remembrance

When college days are long in the dark past and our future selves look back upon our Alma Mater what is the spot in the old school that will shine golden? Shall we remember the lessons in psychology and physiology and grammar and Latin that we so patiently toiled over by the midnight lamp? Some of us will. Shall we remember the Prof. who guided our youthful minds into the pathway of truth? Surely some of the great hearted, broad minded, beloved teachers we shall never forget. Shall we recall the faces of even our classmates and those who seem now to us to populate the world? Doubtless some of us shall go through life together with a never-ending friendship, live together and die for one another like Damon and Pythias or perhaps die and be buried together like Abelard and Eloise. But these things will fade—life's care and joys will bring new lessons to be solved—to idols and adoration of new friends, but nothing in our afterlives can compare with the social side of college life. It is upon the parties and dances, the teas and moonlit boatrides, the picnics, the friendly formal meetings of our literary societies, and religious organizations, the hourly recess gatherings at our corners, it is upon these things that the bright light of golden remembrances will shine in the days to come when college days are gone.

And so, oh aspiring young pedagogues with your book wormish spectacles! scorn not the frivolities of the pages just gone by! Store up in your hearts these pages, fill your fancies with the dreams you have dreamed, with the dances you have danced, and the friends you have loved. They will pass as youth will pass and in years to come these pages will be the ones where you will find recorded the life of your college life!

Basketball

The varsity basket ball squad of 1918-19 continued the splendid record made in this line of sport in previous years by retaining the city championship for the third consecutive year and finishing the season with a firm hold on third place in the I. C. A. L. Wabash again won first place while the Earlham College quintet was awarded second place by virtue of the 40-25 defeat handed to our team in the only game played between the two schools.

Coach Bayh

service until late in December and did not resume his work here until the opening of the Winter Quarter. This gave him the mammoth task of developing a team in a few weeks to compete with teams having the advantage of several months' practice. Another handicap was that the school gymnasium was used by the S. A. T. C. unit until the time the unit was broken up. The Y. M. C. A. floor, where all Normal games are usually played, was closed for repairs, so no place for early practice was available. Later, all practice had to be held in our small gymnasium while the games were played on the K. of C. floor. However, these handicaps only served to make the work of the season shine the brighter.

"Billy" Williams

The season's record demands no alibis, but yet it is only fair to say that several things proved a handicap at the beginning of the season. Coach Bayh, who deserves a great deal of credit for the splendid work of the team, was not discharged from military

"Harvey" Winters

A large squad answered the first call for practice, including Jones, Winter, Schinnerer, Binning, Wisely, Addison, Royer, Cunningham, Daugherty, Younts, Kerr, Harter and Cofling. At the end of the first week, "Jack" Hannah, a letter man of 16-17 entered school from military service and the following week, basket ball prospects took a sudden jump with the return of Glen Curtis, a varsity man of several years ago, and of Herb Curtis and "Billy" Williams star guard combination of 16-17. Work then began in real earnest.

At the first meeting of the squad, "Billy" was chosen as captain and proved to be a scrappy, aggressive leader. Jones and Winters early showed marked ability to team together at forward and were chosen by Coach Bayh for those positions. Herb Curtis was shifted to center and proved to be a good pivot man. Glen Curtis worked with Capt. Williams at guard until he left school to take a position, and Cunningham was sent in as guard. Hannah, Binning and Schinnerer were reliable substitutes and were used in most of the games.

A glance at the season's record tells the story of the fight for the city championship. The first game was easily won by a score of 41 to 22 but, in the second, the Engineers sprung a surprise and won by a score of 26 to 22 in a thrilling contest. With the championship at stake, the team was equal to the test and won the last game by a score of 32 to 17, thanks to the playing of every member of the squad and the loyal support of the faculty and student body.

Capt. Williams, "Tubby" Curtis and "Jack" Hannah were playing their last year for old I. S. N. This leaves Jones, Winter, Binning, Cunningham and Schinnerer and with this nucleus, prospects for a winning team next year are very bright.

"Cunnie" Cunningham

At the close of the season, letters and sweaters were awarded to Capt. Williams, Curtis, Cunningham, Jones, Winter, Binning, Schinnerer, Hannah, and Manager Otis Wilson. Monograms were awarded to Daugherty, Addison, and Glen Curtis.

Baseball

Kerr

Not content with having had one of the best basketball records in recent years the school athletes got busy at the very beginning of the baseball season and have developed a team that bids fair at present to even eclipse the glory of the basketball record. For the first time in four years the Teachers have an undisputed title to the city championship by defeating Rose Poly in the first two games of the series. Even now, as the Annual goes to press, the men are waiting eagerly for the chance to annex the I. C. A. L. championship in the game with Franklin College on June 3, and Pres. Parsons, who has a rare gift of prophecy in Normal athletic contests, says "It is not a question of whether or not we are going to win, but a question of how large the score will be."

Coach Bayh had a good bunch of men to pick from at the beginning of the season and has developed a smooth-working baseball machine. Kerr, star hurler for the last two years, entered school at the opening of the Spring Quarter and has been going better than ever this season. His work has stamped him as one of the best, if not the best, college pitcher in the state. Crawford, a new man from Normal High School, and Whitmer, a freshman from Clay City High School, have proved themselves pitchers of ability and have been able to lessen the burden for Kerr considerably.

Winter

Wilson

Young

"Cap" Clark returned from military service in time to take his regular place behind the bat and is playing for his last year in splendid form.

Wilson, playing his fourth and last year for Normal and this year justly honored with the captaincy, is holding down second base admirably with Clodfelter, a two-year letter man, as an able side-partner at short. Winter, the "demon slugger" of the team of 1917 and basket-ball star, easily regained his old position at the far corner and is playing up to his old-time form. The only place left vacant for a new man was at the initial sack and "Peanuts" Rausch, a Garfield star, stepped in here without any difficulty and completed one of the best infield machines that has represented the old Blue and White for several years.

Rausch

"Mike" Schinnerer, John Young, and Johnny Lloyd stepped into their old places in the outfield and have formed a good combination there. "Billy" Williams, a basketball star, has been holding down the job of general utility man. Other members of the squad are Addison, Sisson, McLaughlin, Harr, DeBaum, and Wayne.

Again, as in basket ball, the record tells its own story. With almost no practice at all, the team met Indiana University at Bloomington and were defeated in a hotly contested game by a score of 4 to 1 for the only defeat of the season to date.

The "Fighting Engineers" were humbled in the first game at Rose Field by a score of 7 to 1. Not yet satisfied, the Blue and White came back and put the series on ice in the second game by a score of 4 to 2. Kerr pitched both games and had the Engineers at his mercy at all stages. With a third game scheduled for June 6, we hope to be able to make a clean sweep of the series and, with a decisive victory over Franklin in the championship fracas, the season's triumph will be completed in every way.

Capt. Wilson and Clark are the only men lost by graduation this year and prospects for the next few years to come are very bright.

Tennis

For many years past Normal has never taken a very great interest in the game of tennis. In 1917 several fellows were out for the "Try-outs" and some very good material showed up. Last year nothing was done to encourage the sport owing to the scarcity of men. But this year, there came a keen interest for the net game through the efforts of Manager Mabel Churchman and Coach Bayh. Although their plans for this season have not met with total success their efforts have not been in vain for a solid foundation has been laid for the sport next year. Normal was represented at the I. C. A. L. this year by the Messrs. Frank Grove and Joseph McKinney, the "Scircleville Stars." The boys made a good showing and will make it very (if not too) interesting for the Rose strikers at the Normal-Rose meet June 7th.

The war caused a decline in the interest in track for the years 1917 and 1918 but there are now indications of a revival in the track and field sports. Coach Bayh made a call for candidates early in the Spring term and the few men who responded, in addition to several high school stars from the Mid-spring term, have been working daily at the gym, and at Parsons Field.

On account of the strenuous work with the baseball squad Coach Bayh turned the work of the thin-clads over to Manager Wall and Coach Byrn of the Normal High School. Among the men trying out for the various events on the track and field are Capt. Knaub, Lloyd, Andrew, Lucas, Evrard, Manhart, Richart, Fisher, Nelson, Richey, Hochstetler, Rutherford and Rider.

Nelson      Andrew      Manhart      "Rusty" Rutherford      Rider      Richey      Richart

Owing to the late start and several injuries, none of the Normal entries placed in the I. C. A. L. meet at Franklin, the meet being won by Wabash. At the present time, however, more interest is being manifested and more time is being given to practice through the help of Coach Byrn; for on June 7, Normal meets Rose Poly in a dual meet on the Rose Field. Notwithstanding the fact that Poly carried off one first and placed in several other events at the I. C. A. L. meet, Normal has a good chance of carrying off the honors in the meet with Poly.

It is thought that by next year I. S. N. will have reached as high a plane in track as it has in baseball, basketball and tennis, for there are many men now in school who with practice and coaching will be able to bring this ancient sport to that level in which it should be.

During the basketball season the team much appreciated the support of the school with organized yells which were an inspiration at the games and, when given at Chapel, a stimulus of enthusiasm.

Organized yelling is impossible without good leadership and with our leaders, Clarence Lloyd and F. B. Manhart, back again next year we expect Normal to yell louder, longer, and faster than she ever did before.

ACTIVITIES

Oratorical League

J. Carlton Hannah
President

D. Mabel Churchman
Vice-President

Virgil Mullins
Secretary

Jake Maehling
Treasurer

The Oratorical and Debating League got away to a late start this year due to war conditions, as was true of most of the organizations. All plans of organizing the league at all this year were abandoned for some time, but late in the Winter Quarter the Michigan State Normal issued a challenge to the school to hold one debate at least instead of the customary dual debate. Prof. Bacon notified each class to select two representatives to the league and at the opening of the Spring Quarter, the election of officers was held. Carlton Hannah was elected president; D. Mabel Churchman, vice-president; Virgil R. Mullins, secretary, and Jacob Maehling, treasurer.

The debate with the Michigan State Normal at Ypsilanti was the only activity of the year for the league. Plans are under way at present for several activities to put the league on a solid footing for the work next year.

J. CARLTON HANNAH
Third Speaker

JOHN YOUNG
First Speaker

HARLAN MILLER
Second Speaker

The Indiana State Normal Debating Team met the Michigan State Normal team at Ypsilanti, Mich., May 16, 1919, for the only debate of the school year.

The question debated was, "Resolved, That all state and local taxes should be derived from a single tax on the economic rent of the land."

Our team argued the negative side of the question and advanced the classified property and income tax.

John Young, the first negative speaker, outlined the negative field and showed how the tendencies in modern taxation were toward the classified and income taxes. Harlan V. Miller, second speaker, advanced the arguments of the negative plan and showed how it worked where it was now in existence. Carlton Hannah, final negative, showed the weaknesses of the single tax and how it had never worked successfully.

The negative based its argument upon practical solutions already in existence as favored by the National Tax Association and showed the failure of the Single Tax by quotations from the Canadian premiers where the single tax in a modified form exists.

By a clear misrepresentation of facts, the last affirmative rebuttalist darkened the sky for the negative and an affirmative decision was rendered. The decision surprised a goodly number of the audience as well as the negative team.

The debate this year was prepared in the shortest possible time. A very few days were found for delivery and drill, but under the skillful coaching of Prof. Bacon, the debate was handled in such a manner as to leave no discredit upon either the representatives or the school.

Chorus Class

For its annual production this year under the direction of Prof. Lowell Mason Tilson, head of the music department, the Chorus Class gave a recital of Frederic H. Cowen's famous production, "The Rose Maiden." An audience that filled the large Normal Hall to its fullest capacity greeted the first production and were enthusiastic in their praises. This is the first year that the solo parts have been carried by Normal students with no help from outside talent and the class deserves great credit on this account.

The soprano soloists, Misses Jean Gammack, Beulah Chappelle, Alberta Steele; alto, Miss Estella Perkins; tenor, Mr. Herbert Lahr; baritone, Mr. Robert Strickler, pleased the audience with their careful rendering of the beautiful melodies. These voices were as pleasing when blended in duets and trios as when singing alone.

Press Club

Our Press Club is the newest organization in school. It had its origin away back in January when Normal received an invitation to send a representative to Indianapolis to a meeting to be held on Feb. 1, 1919, for the purpose of reorganizing the Inter-collegiate Press Association. This organization had existed previous to the war, but had been discontinued for obvious reasons. It was decided to send the Editor of the weekly Advance to the meeting. Earlham, Franklin, Purdue, Indiana University, and Butler were represented at the meeting. Sufficient interest was manifested among the delegates to make it advisable to reorganize the association. The work of women in the war and in other activities was recognized and it was decided to rewrite the constitution so that clubs of those schools which had women on the staff of the school paper might also become members. When the report of the meeting was given and the proposition to organize a Press Club in Normal agitated, it was looked upon favorably by the members of the Board of Control.

On April 11 and 12, a convention of the Intercollegiate Press Association was called at Franklin, Indiana, and Normal was invited to send three voting delegates to this convention. Three representatives were sent, Miss Lucile Viehe, Editor of the Annual, Miss Myrtle Miller, Editor of the Advance, and Jacob Maehling, Advertising Manager of the Advance. The convention was a success and the three delegates came home eager to organize a Press Club of their own.

After consulting Mr. Cunningham a joint meeting of Weekly and Annual staffs was called and the matter was discussed freely. A committee was appointed to draft a constitution and bring it before the staff members. At the next meeting the constitution was considered and adopted and the following officers elected: Myrtle Miller, president; Jacob Maehling, vice-president, and Esther Hance, secretary and treasurer.

The purpose of the club is to affiliate with other Press Clubs of the various colleges and Universities of the state to discuss questions in connection with our publications, and to improve the general condition of our newspaper work. The club has met each week since its organization and had some very interesting discussions on such subjects as "Journalism," "The Woman's Page" and the preparation of a model paper. Mr. C. T. Jewett, city editor of the Terre Haute Star also came and discussed the general field of journalism, a discussion that was greatly appreciated by the club members. We are hoping that, although this is a new organization, it will grow and become effective in the future activities of the school.

Each year during the Spring, a State Convention is held at one of the schools represented in the Association. Normal, according to her entrance into the Association, has her turn in 1926 and we are hoping that long ere that time a strong club will have evolved and be able to do the honors of Normal royally to the visiting clubs.

The Normal Advance

"The Normal Advance" began work in the fall somewhat under difficulties. On account of the fact that the editor who had been elected in the spring was called into camp, a new editor had to be chosen. This was done at the first meeting in October. "Flu" broke out shortly after and all work was suspended for the time being. When school work was resumed the new editor was notified of her election and as soon as possible the staff was organized. The new staff went to work in earnest and the first paper was put out on November 26, 1918.

During the year the staff has worked together well and faithfully. School work has been quite heavy and therefore it has been necessary to make some changes from time to time. At the beginning of the Winter quarter after the members of the S. A. T. C. had been discharged, some changes occurred. Nelson Schroeder, the treasurer, withdrew from school to begin work in a local bank and Dean Pattison who had been S. A. T. C. and Athletic Reporter was advanced to treasurer. With the removal of the S. A. T. C. unit the men of the school became interested in athletics and Paul Addison became the official reporter.

Jacob Maehling found the work in the advertising department too heavy for one man and Ruth Swearingen was elected to be his assistant. Rollie Brooking began work in the Fall Quarter as circulation manager and was assisted by Robert Shanner and Vane Rutherford. Because of heavy work the first two men resigned and Mabel Churchman was elected to the managership. She was assisted by Dorothy Glenn, Vane Rutherford, and Georgia Baker. With the opening of the Spring Quarter, on account of illness Mabel Churchman resigned and Dorothy Glenn took her place with Rosa Schwartz and Maude Hays as new assistants. The remainder of the staff have held throughout the year.

All the members of the staff have worked earnestly to keep the paper up to the old standard. A military section has been carried all along consisting of letters from our boys. This has proved very interesting to the readers both at home and across the seas.

The school has continued to send the paper to our boys in service as a means of keeping in touch with Normal and we have received many letters from these boys expressing their keen delight and pleasure in receiving these papers.

Special numbers were gotten out for Thanksgiving and Christmas with the emphasis placed on messages to the soldier boys. Letters were written by members of the faculty and various organizations of the school expressing the greetings and good wishes of the faculty and students to the men in service. It is intended that a special number shall be gotten out for Homecoming week, with which number the year will be ended. The volume number is XXIV and with the last issue there will have been 27 numbers for the current year.

As a whole, the year has proved a pleasant one and has been financially successful. It has been the purpose of all on the staff to make the paper the best that time permitted and we hope the year has not been spent in vain.

Reflex Actions

High in the halls of science where the labs and things were found
A class in dog-dissection the prof was gathered 'round.

"Can dogs and cats remember? Now think before you say!"

"Yes," they smiled and answered, but a wise one answered, "Nay!"

"'Tis only reflex action, they neither think nor feel,
They learn by imitation, but no such doing's real!"

Then the prof spoke up in answer to the young psychologist,
Whose joy was not in living but in giving words a twist,

"Now lookee here, my lady, you say 'tis thus and so,
But you're not dog or kitten, you're human, don't you know!"

"'Tis only reflex action. Experiments I've tried
By hundreds and by thousands and I've read far and wide."

Then upspoke the wise professor. "You're so certain that you know,
Now listen to this story and tell me what is so:

"A good lad strayed from home once and wandered far and wide,
For years in crime he drifted, and then came home to hide.

"So changed was he his mother knew not her only son,
For a tramp his sweetheart passed him—none knew him, no not one!

"But his good old dog came running, and barked and licked the hand
Of a well remembered master—then we knew old Tim Land!

"We knew him—we remembered, and the dog remembered too?"

"No, with the dog 'twas reflex action, while 'twas memory with you!"

DOROTHEA WYETH.

CARGO TOO LARGE?

A bright lad once struck Terre Haute
 With a trim intellectual boat.
 He loaded it full
 At a State Normal School
 But alas! his fine barge wouldn't float.

HE CAME FROM LAFAYETTE

In my youth I have often heard tell
 Of the wonderful Terre Haute belle Whose magnificent feet
 Wouldn't pass in Main street
 Which caused her exclaiming, "Oh well."

The Seniors Want To Know:

Who the freshman was who strode into Dean Weng's room in the midst of a recitation to ask the dean to indorse a check; and if said young man would not be taught a lesson if he would repeat such an act while Professor Kelso was conducting a class.

What Harry Winters is going to do with all those cigars he is winning by driving out two hits per game.

If the varsity men have not learned that a major can be hard-boiled even after he has laid aside his uniform.

If the students, faculty, and people of Terre Haute have noticed the new kick in Normal athletics and if they knew it was caused by a new kick in Normal school spirit.

If the girl who tried to improve upon Webster's definition of a real man improved her position any with the young men of the school.

Who the professor was who forgot to throw away his cigar before he entered his class room; who it was that called his attention to the fact; and if it didn't happen after the Dad Elliott resolutions were passed.

Just who was that Normal student who was so impressed by the talks of Dad Elliott that he tried to get Schomer to return the money paid in advance for dancing lessons, and whether or not he advised Schomer to go to hear the said man Elliott.

If the class at the Terre Haute House does not have a more regular attendance than some of those in the Normal class rooms.

Just what Dr. Acher said when he found a new assistant in charge of the office of the psychological laboratories; and which calling was the hardest to face, that of the dear Doctor or of Miss Frieda.

If there is any connection between having the sneech of a lecturer committed to memory and the fact that Dr. Parsons had to get hard-boiled in order to secure a sufficiently pious audience at chapel.

Who the two girls were who were visiting the school and were trying to get into the faculty cloak room and were described by Tom Arvin to the editor of the Weekly Advance; the one as having a knot of hair over her right eye; the other as squint-eyed, sleepy-looking, and formerly very popular with the boys of Normal.

If the increase in the length of skirts will cause a similar decline in the price of silk hose, and if not a decline in price a decline in the use of such. Or is there another real reason for wearing silk hose.

If Billy Williams had any difficulty identifying Howard Wittenberg's history teacher from Howard's description.

If the Normal girl who was with the senior, who turned while walking down Eagle Street to see the effects of the naughty wind as displayed on the library steps and who said to the said senior, "Well, look. I would too if I were a boy," wasn't a real girl.

If some of the students think the commercial rooms are a cloak room and if, judging from the number in attendance, there is a Bolsheviki movement or opposition chapel service run there during chapel hour.

If a sporting editor of the calibre of Ralph White and who edited a sporting page in one of the city papers for numberless years should not send an assistant out to Parsons Field to discover which arm Kerr uses in pitching, for in his paper of April 27, he designated the Pride of the Normal fans as a southpaw; and if such a statement does not show a lack of appreciation for the Normal team.

If the faculty, especially the majority of the members, knew that Normal had a baseball diamond named after the president and that the said diamond was located at Second and Canal streets. Said park may be reached by walking.

If a dollar and a half and Andy Crawford's kit of Auto tools is not a rather high price to pay for a three-base hit in a twenty to nothing game.

If the members of the state legislature, trustees and so on would not be glad to build a new gymnasium if we could arrange to get them to play or attend a game of basketball in our present one.

If our editor has not been so busy during the past term that very few members of the student body have been able to recognize her as she hurried through the halls; and besides just what does our editor get for getting up this book anyway.

If the student body would be surprised if a member of the faculty forgot to give the same speech term after term; and if it is not about time for the faculty to get away from their set speeches and even from their classroom gossip in their chapel talks.

If the student who was slow in seeing just where Dr. Acher was going with his classes, lasses, asses was a Freshman or Senior, and if the latter whether or not he is impossible or an Englishman.

If the length of Professor Young is not rather disconcerting to beginning students in shorthand.

Just what would be the proper thing to do regarding sections; decrease the number or build an addition to the school containing mostly corners.

If Professor Turman was aware that the drawing boards scattered around his room have at times been used as camouflage in a tulip bombardment during class periods.

9:50

At exactly nine-fifty o'clock every day
Some preacher or other comes to chapel to say
How much it inspires him to look upon us—
On our fresh happy faces, and all such stuff;
And we settle down to take a good look
At our teachers in chapel—'tis a veritable book!
Our President from the edge of his chair looks about;
For gigglers and gossips he's on the look out.
And some good Professors, religiously made,
With hands piously folded and looks stern and staid,
Gaze on the ceiling (it really is rare)
While many another slips down in his chair
For a ten-minute nap. We especially note
Our psychology Prof., and unanimously vote
The palm to our mathematician, by name
Higgins, you know, who's acquired such great fame
For failing to 'wake when the amen comes (His head being full of such difficult sums).
Miss Schweitzer's bright eye every day is seen
Sharp on the look out—but, you see, she's the Dean!
Our artist, the one who loves purple, you see,
With his hands nicely folded upon his right knee,
Gazes away into blank space every day—
'Tis our fine stained-glass windows he likes so, they say.
Mr. Stalker's kind eyes beneath those fine curls,
Look 'round at something, do you s'pose it's girls?
Solemn Mary Moran, on the President's day
Gets into the jokes about O'Flint and O'Shea.
Mr. Curry, that literature Prof., much adored,
We commend for his honesty—he frankly looks bored.
Mr. Mutterer, dumb from the beginning of time,
Has been speaking in chapel, we bet you a dime.
We'd accomplish more wonders in this great world war
Than thrashing the Germans and canning the czar.
Mr. Kelso, from six minutes after, sits up
And watches the clock, and is ready to jump
The instant the preacher has breathed the "amen."
And when that's done we all take a new breath, and then
With a jolly good bounce come down out of the skies,
And with joy we obey the President's "Please rise!"

—Dorothea Wyeth.

The Little Red Cottage

That glowing red building, not unlike a medieval castle on the hilltop yonder, is the Little Red College for the scientific training of scientific pedagogues, not unlike a medieval castle in its towers and turrets, and more like a medieval castle than a real live college in its lack of campus. And notice the flag on the topmost tower that flutters so gaily against the blue skies of June when Commencement time draws near, and droops as despairingly in the gray days of November as our spirits when the finals are at hand.

Within, the Little Red College is narrow and old-fashioned. The narrow halls see as little of the light of the twentieth century as some of the musty problems in scientific pedagogy expounded by the musty old professors. The class rooms are old and cracked and hermetically sealed, like the minds of the pedagogues who there rule supreme. But there are some as near the land of eternal youth as the sunny skies of sunny Italy. For these and the real professors who inhabit them, thank God! They rescue our Little Red College from the sordid depths of scientific pedagogy.

The inhabitants of the Little Red College are aspiring young pedagogues. They are for the most part of the fairer sex. Oh, there are a few otherwise—a few regular fellows, a few regular Sister Susies, and a few worth noticing, like That Is, and the Smiley Boy, and Dom Sci Mr. T. As for the majority party, there are old maids and snobs (sororities? yes, my dear, we have 'em), and silly flirts, and real girls, and scholarly young ladies in book-wormish spectacles.

In short half the Little Red College is fine and open-minded and aspires heavenward in the direction of the flag on its topmost tower, and the other half is completely fossilized and fit for exhibition in a glass case.

Dom Sci Mr. T.

Dom Sci Mr. T. came puffing and blowing into the physiology lab on the first day of school. He hesitated only an instant before crossing over to a group of gossiping ladies who were discussing the problems of the dom. sci. lab. With an extraordinary effort of his puffy over-indulged physical and psychical being Dom Sci Mr. T. uttered an "ah" and dropped simultaneously into the conversation and a seat beside a fair lass, who was (though Dom Sci Mr. T. did not know it), the best cook in all of Perry County down state.

"Ah!" said Dom Sci Mr. T., "You are discussing the properties of starch! Do tell me, is the domestic science course offered here of very great value?"

The young ladies stopped talking (but only for an instant) to look at this young man who had dropped upon them like a softy slushy snowball on a late spring day. A studious young person in huge book-wormish spectacles condescended to inform him that the courses in cooking were excellent, but for her part she preferred the courses in dietetics and household chemistry. A pretty dark-haired damsel, who would flirt with anything that wore trousers, lifted her black eyes and smiled irresistibly on him. The remainder of the group were inclined to ignore him, and one green-eyed personage was actually observed to turn up her nose!

Dom Sci Mr. T. felt himself fully accepted into the conversation, and, manlike, led the conversation forth upon a new path. "You know," he said with a coquetish glance over his shoulder at the dark-haired girl, "I am very fond of domestic science."

"You don't say so!" murmured the ladies with one accord.

"Yes, you know. . . . I'll tell you all about it," he began, settling himself with several adorable little wiggles. "You see there was a girl down home who was the Governor's daughter, and she was a friend of mine."

"The Governor's daughter!" echoed the black-eyed miss, who was beginning to be convinced that he would do (to flirt with, of course.)

"Yes," carelessly replied Mr. T. "And she went away to school to study domestic science, and she was the best cook in all the county where I live."

"Where do you live, pray?" inquired the lady who was (though Dom Sci Mr. T. did not know it) the best cook in all of Perry County down state.

"Why, in Pike County." (He called it county in the good old Hoosier style) "Abraham Lincoln passed through our county once when he was on his way to Kentucky. Yes, ma'am, and do you know Secretary Lansing? yes Mr. Lansing, came and picked roses in our garden once for his wife's great grandmother's grave, and she's buried in the Unitarian Churchyard, and that's about a mile and seven-eighths from our house."

He paused for the sake of impression. The black-eyed damsel flashed him a most bewitching smile, but the best cook in all Perry County downstate said impatiently, "Go on about the Governor's daughter."

"Well, the Governor's daughter she was the best cook in all the county, but my dad he made a bet that I could beat her on teacher's exam in dom. sci. So I takes the exam, and when the grades come back, the Governor's daughter she gets 86, and I get 97!"

"You must be bright," exclaimed the young ladies.

"Oh, no, I'm not bright. I just know how to bluff." And he was just about to put his finger in his mouth in the manner approved for shy country maidens, when the professor came forward and humbly begged all the young ladies to please come to order.

Geometric Boarding

1. All boarding houses are equal to the same boarding house.
2. A single room is one having no parts and no magnitude.
3. All other rooms being taken, a single room may be said to be a double room.
4. A wrangle is the difference between two boarders which meet but not on the same floor.
5. The landlady is a parallelogram, i. e., an oblong angular figure which can't be described and is equal to anything.
6. The landlady may be reduced to her lowest terms by a series of propositions.
7. Any two meals at a boarding house taken together are less than one square feed.
8. A bee line may be taken from one boarding house to another boarding house.
9. A pie may be produced any number of times.
10. The sheets of a boarding house bed stretched ever so far both ways will not meet.
11. On the same bill and on the same side of it, there should not be two charges on the same thing.
12. Let the wrangle between the first boarder and the landlady equal the wrangle between the landlady and the other boarder, then shall the weekly bills of both boarders be equal. For, if not, let the one bill be the greater, then the other is less than it might have been, which is absurd. VASSAR ANNUAL.

K. M.—I've been working on a problem for about a half an hour and I don't understand it, can you help me?

Dreams of Youth

(Dedicated to the Students of I. S. N. S.)

Youth's purple far-off hills uprise
Into a wondrous paradise
Of treasures rich and vistas fair,
Inhabited by being rare.

These rippling rills kissed by the sun
Thou glades and bowers of beauty run
And earth and sky and sea are bent
In scenes of joy and sweet content.

There men are brave and women good,
There hearts beat true in brotherhood,
There love comes by each life to bless
And great Ideals reach success.

O Heaven forbid that one should see
Such visions fair that may not be
Forbid that longing souls may grope
In vales of disappointed hope.

May all your earth be filled with good
Boost for a great world brotherhood
And may each brave adventure new
Be one of youth's dreams coming true.

To Normal

A sonnet to our Normal? Can it be
A subject too prosaic to be shown
In that poetic measure? Who has known
A higher love, School Mother, than for thee
Is felt? Our lives in each act must agree
With thy behests. And who has upward grown
Within thy precincts, from thy portals flown
Full-fledged, and not far greater heights to see?
Then, Normal, let it never more be said
Thou could'st not bring a sonnet into mind
If mind sincere should concentrate on you
To see thy good works. Inspiration true
For nobler efforts, in thy halls we find,
And higher aims in life by thee art bred.

The Saddest Thing of All

At eventide beside the salty sea,
Upon the rocks storm-worn through countless years
An old man sat, white-haired, blue-eyed, and sad.
As he watched the soft smiles of the setting sun
Kiss the salt sea's snowy foam to gold,
Like some mortal sea nymph's snowy curls
Turned gold in death by some immortal hand,
He thought perhaps the oft heard myth was truth—
Of how an ancient daughter of the deep,
Who dwelt in days long dead on those black rocks,
Unbound at each day's close her snowy hair
And let it float upon the evening waves,
And how the sun-god at that peaceful hour
When he dies to rise again, renewed each day,
Beheld and loved the nymph, despite her age
And his bright youth, and kissed her snowy locks
And withered cheeks to golden youth again;
And so the ancient nymph and youthful god,
Made one in age by love's immortal breath,
Passed beyond the ocean's farthest brink
To the land from whence we come and whither go,
To live in everlasting joy. For there
There is no time, no growing old, naught but Eternal youth, and everlasting love.

With brooding restless eyes the old man gazed
At the sun-set's softened golds and dainty pinks
Reflected in the gentle after-flow
Of the broken waves upon the sandy beach.
A music faint and soft and low the waves
Brought in from out the boundless deep, a strain
Sweet, and like the blue eyes, gently sad.
A song the lapping waters seemed to sing
Of youth and hope and love all unfilled,
The gentle tragedy of his sad life,
For he had been since childhood sorrowful,
Through all his life the saddest thing on earth.
As a child at eventide on those same rocks
He had seen visions of a perfect joy
Which he had left, but would soon find again.
In later life the noise of wealth and fame
Had drowned those faint sad memories, they seemed
Of some far distant land, some distant life,
Some distant love, a hazy picture then
Of one sad day,—oh, why was it that he Must ever be the saddest thing on earth?

A great wave breaking, foaming on the rocks.
Broke too the magic spell whereby he saw
Beyond the sea, beyond the sorrowful earth,
Where we must surely live ere we are born.

The earth exchanged the twilight's peaceful gray
For the silvery glory of the soft warm night.
The mellow moon, her smiling radiance
Unimpaired by cloud or shadow, lit
A magic path across the night-blue sea,
Where the fairies, and the spirits of love and joy
Lightly sported on the sparkling wave.
And still the old man sat. The mystery,
The beauty, and the peace of night's deep calm
Charmed his restless spirit, still
The waves brought in perplexing memories
Of one he loved, but never had beheld,
Though he had searched for her through all the world.
His heart was closed to the joy that night will give
To all that look upon her countless stars,
And he remained the saddest thing on earth.

All night he saw as on a stage set forth,
Events, ambitions, people, shifting scenes,
In short, the tragic drama of his life.
First his boyhood days when he had played
On yonder beach, and dreamed on those sad rocks,
And heard the music from afar, and seen
Visions of the land of perfect joy.
His childhood sadly past, and in his youth,
As leader of the quaint old fishing folk,
He searched the sea as he had searched the rocks
In childhood for her for whom he longed.
He searched the wild world o'er but found her not.
Wealth came and fame and friends, but never love,
Never peace and never joy. His life
Wore on, he did much good, and many loved
And envied the saddest thing on earth.

And as the days wore on he quite forgot
His search. His sorrow grew less keen, but youth
Soon sped. Age came. His restless life was done.
He came to his native town beside the sea
To die—his mission unfilled—to die
As he had lived the saddest thing on earth.
At length the bright moon dipped into the sea,
Sank beneath the waves, and left the stars
To guard the lonely blue-eyed man. The tide
Went and the rocks stood high above the waves.
The old man, alone and lonely, prayed for death
Through that dark hour when all the world seems dead.

And God himself asleep. The stars grew dim,
The night hues vanished from the earth, the air
Grew soft as the petals of a velvet rose.
The light came slowly, then Heaven's gate
Burst open and the day came forth, full-robed
In burning gold and black and crimson clouds.
In the golden east the old man thought he saw
A city whose towers of gold and turrets gleamed
In the freshness of the new-born day; and by
The city flowed a narrow silver stream,
Wider widening till it reached a sea
Whose golden breakers, capped with crimson, washed
Away into the gray of mellow morn—
The city beautiful for which he longed—
The land of hope and love and perfect joy!
At the meeting place of sky and sea a ship,
Her gleaming sails full spread to catch the breeze
That wafted her across the gentle sea,
Seemed as though it came to carry him
To the happy heart of the endless golden east.
In a cloud of morning purple overhead
He saw a face—it was!—it was!—his search
Was o'er! His heart beat happily alas!
'Twas but a cloud. The sun, a great round ball
Of blazing gold, from the deep blue sea peeped out.
The stars were gone. The vision was obscured.
Day and sorrow and care were come again.

The village woke; the children came to play,
Hardy sun-tanned boys and girls to laugh,
And shout, and dart among the rocks, and climb
Among the boats at anchor near the shore.
Among them was a tender gold-haired girl,
Blue-eyed and sad, who did not romp and run,
But sat alone beside the boundless sea.
A happiness more sad than sorrow stole
Into the old man's heart; perhaps because
She was so like his own dead boyhood self,
Perhaps, the picture in his heart was dim.
The cloud face long had gone—it could not be!
For she was but a child! And yet what joy,
What peace were in his soul! Perhaps it was,
For this our life is but a day on Time's
Eternal calendar, and what to God
Are four-score years and ten? Yes it was she.

The blue-eyed child as by some magic drawn
Came near. He took her in his arms and knew
His search was done. He kissed her golden hair
And the veil fell from his sad blue eyes. He saw
That distant happy land where they had dwelt,
By fate "the lovers" called in laughing scorn.
He lived again that sad, sad day when time
Had torn her from his arms and bidden him
To earth. He heard again her parting cry,
"Be till I come the saddest thing on earth."
Now she was come. His life was o'er and hers
Was just begun, and they must part again.
He was wondering if she knew, child though she was,
When her baby arms went around his neck,
And she whispered, "Was it long before I came?
Was it hard to be the saddest thing on earth?"

Suddenly their blue eyes filled with tears;
They screamed, but his voice was old and hers was young.
The tide was rising higher than it wont,
And the narrow path that shut the lonely rock
From safety lay obscured beneath the waves.
Their feet the rising ocean washed, their cries
The rushing water drowned. None saw until
The great black rocks lay all beneath the waves,
When the tide had reached the full, the earth beheld
And all who lived within its sorrowful sphere,
The noondays sunny sparkle dancing on
The blue blue waves; but they whom fate had called
"The lovers" passed beyond the whispering sea
To that eternal Bourne where time and space
Are naught, but hope and love are infinite,
To live together endlessly, to know
A joy as boundless as the sky, a love
As long as the sorrows of our mortal earth,
A peace as deep and calm and measureless
As the waters of the moonlit summer sea.

DOROTHEA WYETH.

The Inevitable

AND now the tale is told. The rush and hurry is about ended, and the little office is almost deserted. No longer is the table stacked with plates, and no longer are the staff members making pictures. At last the careworn editor has time to look up from her papers and pictures and reflect and read the epigrams on the board which have been written by some despondent members of the staff. Not only to fill a page, but also as a last line of defense and an opportunity to mention those who have so loyally aided in the construction of this book, is this page written. This publication is not the work of one, or of a few, but the result of the efforts of many persons, and it is for those efforts that we wish to express our appreciation at this time.

Style Supremacy

ALTHOUGH the first chapter in the history of the A. Herz establishment is concerned chiefly with the manufacture of hoop-skirts—those classic garments of a half-century ago—the first step into the field of women's fashions properly began with the purchase and sale of twelve cloaks during the winter season of 1872.

Encouraged by the success of his first venture, the owner launched boldly into this important branch of merchandising, and within a comparatively few years had established the Herz Store firmly in the confidence of fashionable women of this early period.

Today nine-tenths of the merchandise in Herz's derives much of its worth from style correctness. Few staples are offered. This is strictly a store of specialties.

PRESTIGE in style as well as value is the reward of unceasing alertness, and the recognition of that subtle quality in merchandise—so prized and difficult to find—personality.

Any good article of apparel—a suit, a coat, a blouse, a pair of gloves—may be exactly suited to the individual beauty and figure of one woman and completely out of harmony with the requirements of another.

Style, in its strictest sense, is something more than mere conformity with the mandates of New York and Paris. It is the accurate blending of two personalities—garment and wearer—the one with the other.

SUPPLYING such a service requires an ample selection for each special type, and a competent staff of sales persons to assist in choosing with good taste and judgment.

The evident success with which we have been able to provide this service is exceedingly gratifying to this fifty year old institution, which has from the beginning placed the satisfaction of its customers before all other considerations.
